Portland “Builds Out” Mandatory Deconstruction Ordinance – In 2016, Portland became the first city in North America to require deconstruction for its oldest and most historic houses. Since then, more than 200 houses have been deconstructed, salvaging 2.4 million pounds of material for reuse. In November 2019, Portland’s City Council unanimously expanded the current deconstruction ordinance from houses and duplexes with a year-built threshold of 1916 to 1940, increasing the number of annually deconstructed houses from one-third to two-thirds of all house demolitions.
