Reduce, Reuse, Repurpose, Resell

My 4Rs Reflection

My 4Rs are reducing, reusing, re-purposing, reselling.

The first step in creating less waste is reducing, then with the stuff you already have you can reuse. Choosing brands like Patagonia who's focus is reducing and reusing is also great. They make quality products that last and if something goes wrong, Patagonia advises you to fix it. They also used recycled materials for their items. That, however, is just one of many brands that respect the environment and understand a company's potential impact.

Taking old things like T-shirts and making them into masks or old clothes as rags for mechanic work is awesome too as a way of reusing. Furthermore, when something is not that old, reselling it is a great way to give it new purpose. When someone is in need of something they can often find used versions for equally as good and way cheaper. After all, there is a saying "One man's trash is another man's treasure".
