

Madeline's Story Continued:

I made a game, because games are fun to play and they are a good way to get important things into other peoples minds. And games are something that people do together and combating in climate change will require people working together, so the game is a good way to model the behavior that we need to stop climate change. I chose slides and ladders because people already know the game and they already know how to play it, so this would allow them to focus on the content. Slides And ladders are also a good game, because for the ladders that shows us what to do but for the slides, it shows us what not to do. We wanna fight climate change but sometimes we make mistakes, like we wanna win the game, but sometimes we go backwards. In conclusion, my project is important because it explains how to help stop climate change, and what to do what not to do. And have fun learning while you're at it.