

Rishitha Sai Polisetti, Pleasanton

Honorable Mention Elementary Illustration

My 4Rs: Rethink, Regrow, Recreate, Rebuild

My (Re)Generation Action Story:

This picture is about the missionaries because my theme was the missionaries and this picture shows what the spanish brought to california when they started to settle. There are orange trees, mustard seeds of when the spanish made a trail, and there are mission buildings.

Continued on next page

Rishitha's Story Continued:

I believe that we should Rethink how we are making energy and think of better ways instead of polluting the earth and the air. I believe that we should Regrow our nature and plant more trees to have a healthy world. I believe that we should recreate the world into a better and happier place to live. I believe that we should rebuild better buildings to stop polluting the air we breath. We have to stop these problems because we are the ones that started them. So we should be the ones that rebuild our home.

In my art the black and white part on the buildings represents what we did to the world and the planet which we can fix today to REBUILD our cummunity. It also represents the bad stuff and pollution we are bringing to the planet. I drew some mustard seeds and a orange tree to represent The missionaries and what we can do to the planet to REGROW the things that we made. The smoke coming out of the building represents the things we could have done in our home to help our home and RETHINK our decisions of what we made. The flowers/crops on building represents what we can do to RECREATE the stuff that we created. So stop this from happening.

This paper I used was from my class and the supplies I used were from home. I used sharpies which I got for a gift from my mom and dad. I also used crayons from my brother because he had them in his cubby and I also used some colored pencils from my mom because she does sewing and uses colored pencils. I also did some blending in the buildings.